

Tourism Services

Employee & organisational resilience in tourism service sector was consistently lower than accommodation sector.

Factors which distinguish tourism services sector:

At employee level

- Dominated by women & younger workers
- High levels of contingent workers
- More distress, anxiety & stress
- Fewer staff accessing supports/resources

At organisation level

- Learning culture & organisational support low
- Less empowered employees than accommodation

Studies show, learning culture predicts organisational resilience

Destination Workforce Resource

Workforce attraction & retention:

Workers are key to the industry. COVID-19 demonstrated the need to improve conditions to retain & attract workers. All actor groups play a role in making work more secure, safe, exciting, & to offer incentives to reduce region to city drain. Further, housing issues need to be resolved. Focus on culture & vibe of industry, not pay – & target key influencers (e.g., parents, career advisors).

Communication, leadership, & collaboration:

Consistent messaging, leadership & supports from policymakers are critical in times of crisis. Leaders should work with employees & operators (in-region) to capitalise on local knowledge & experiences - to seek solutions before, during, & after crises.

Training, development, & empowerment:

All stakeholders need ongoing training to prepare them for crises. Employees, managers, & volunteers alike crave career development & promotional opportunities which enhance resilience & organisational/industry loyalty.

A community approach:

To endure crises, businesses, industry & not-for-profit groups, & local government can build a united 'destination approach' - with input from and engagement with the needs of the broader community. All actors can help revitalise tourism regions' employer/employee brand.

Wellbeing & social support:

Non-work factors are key to workforce resilience. Factors such as work-life balance, secure accommodation, and family and wellbeing supports are critical to improving circumstances. Accessible (in-person) wellbeing programs need to be offered in regional areas.
